Digabit to showcase Documoto at SOLIDWORKS World
Attendees can see how they can create dynamic electronic parts catalogs using Documoto and SOLIDWORKS Composer

(Englewood, CO)—Jan. 30, 2017— Digabit, a SaaS company helping manufacturers solve the challenge of providing online, up-to-date technical documentation and parts catalogs, will be showcasing their product, Documoto, at booth 200 in the Partner Pavilion at SOLIDWORKS World 2017, Feb. 5-8 at the Los Angeles Convention Center. At the booth, Digabit's Senior Director of Solutions Engineering will be doing live demos of Documoto for potential customers.

Show attendees will see how Documoto integrates with SOLIDWORKS Composer and helps eliminate bottlenecks between engineering and publications. Digabit's authoring suite lets technical publishers use CAD-sourced drawings and data from PDM and other system to produces online parts catalogs. In addition, users can easily import and convert Bills of Materials (BoMs), technical illustrations and product metadata to automate much of the publishing process.

The 19th annual SOLIDWORKS World brings together designers, engineers, managers, and partners to discuss ideas, trends, and the technology shaping the future of product design. This is the third year that Digabit has attended the conference.

"By utilizing Documoto along with SOLIDWORKS Composer, it lets users take advantage of structured data to be more productive in their daily work," said Alan Sage, CEO of Digabit. "It simplifies the authoring process, accelerates parts book production, and allows you to publish content online and for print with one unified process."
