Digabit and Etteplan announce a strategic partnership for selling aftermarket parts solutions

Agreement will allow Etteplan to offer solutions and services to customers using Documoto

(Englewood, CO)—March 30, 2017— Digabit, a company helping manufacturers solve the challenge of providing online, up-to-date technical documentation and parts catalogs, and Etteplan, a specialist in engineering, embedded systems, IoT and technical documentation solutions and services, today announced a new partnership to bring Digabit's Documoto solution and services to Etteplan's customers. In addition, Digabit will be sharing Etteplan's engineering and spare parts consultation expertise with its customers.

"As technology continues to evolve, the manufacturing industry must take steps to digitize their workflow processes, which will save them time and increase revenue," said Alan Sage, Digabit CEO. "This is why we are working with Etteplan, a market leader in industrial equipment engineering. This new partnership will combine their vast knowledge and services with our authoring, cloud library and storefront solutions, leading to an exceptional customer experience."

Digabit's enterprise-level information management system allows users to create interactive parts catalogs, share technical information and sell parts and accessories, all from an easy-to-use online platform.

"We are delighted to be able to offer Documoto to our growing customer base that require advanced spare parts catalog expertise," said Petri Ikonen, SVP Technical Documentation Services at Etteplan. "The cooperation with Digabit is strategic for us and confirms Etteplan's position as one of the leading suppliers of spare parts solutions."
