

Documoto Makes Charitable Donation to Canine Partners of the Rockies

DENVER, September 29, 2020 (NewsWire.com) - Documoto,

a Denver-based software company specializing in digital publishing and interactive content management for equipment manufacturers and asset-intensive professionals, is pleased to announce a donation of $1,000 to Canine Partners of the Rockies. Canine Partners of the Rockies, a not-for-profit organization, specializes in training dogs for people with limited mobility disabilities.

As a dog-friendly workplace, Documoto is committed to helping local businesses that offer a wide range of public services designed to help the Colorado community, and Canine Partners of the Rockies (CaPR) exceeds that expectation.

CaPR works in tandem with professionals who train dogs to help people with limited mobility disabilities such as retrieving objects, pulling wheelchairs, opening and closing doors, turning light switches off and on, barking to indicate that help is needed, as well as searching and identifying another person to the handler in need. CaPR is supported by individual donations, grants, foundations, and fundraising activities.

"As citizens of the Colorado community, the Documoto team is proud to support foundations that need assistance with their initiatives," said Steve Blanco, Chief Executive Officer at Documoto. "Canine Partners of the Rockies creates opportunities for those in need by providing independence so that they may live life more fully. Given the COVID crises, we hope that our donation is effective and provides some much-needed support to the volunteers and staff."
